

LEED-NC Exam Study Session

Session Description

Passing the LEED exam requires a working knowledge of LEED and green building as well as the ability to apply that knowledge to LEED project situations. These study sessions provide a review of LEED project administration, the credits and points in each LEED category, and how they are applied on real projects. Homework problems challenge participants to develop a working understanding of the LEED system. Role play exercises during each section will allow participants to practice applying LEED in the way they will be tested on the accreditation exam.

Experienced LEED Accredited Professionals run each study session using a participatory approach for adult learners. All participants will have to study the LEED Reference Manual and credit interpretations outside of the study sessions to prepare for and pass the examination. Participants will also need to purchase the LEED Reference Manual from the USGBC.

Preparation

Students will need to have a copy of the LEED NC v2.2 Reference Guide (hard copy or electronic), and the completion of some homework prior to the session start is strongly encouraged. Click here to purchase the reference guide.
